Newsletter of the Chickasaw County Conservation Board - Conserving our natural resources since 1957 Winter 2026

Director's Dialogue Director, Chad Humpal

Successful Season? I think so!

Let's start with the completion of our new outdoor classroom/shelter house. As you can see from the photos, the finished project is incredible. Although, the photos do not do it justice. I can't thank the New Hampton Lion's Club enough for the work they put into this project. I would also like to thank Tom and JoAnne Myrsiades for the donation of the new recycled picnic tables for the shelter. I can't wait for the spring fieldtrip season to see all the kids using this facility. If you are looking for a place to have an outdoor wedding, I think we have a spot for you.

If you are out looking at the new shelter you may notice a new fire ring next to it. When we put up the new shelter, we needed to remove the old fire ring. My daughter Harper Humpal decided to take this opportunity to complete her Eagle Scout Project. She installed a 12x12 concrete pad along with 2 benches, a table and of course a new fire ring. Thank you, Harper, and all your donors for this great project. Dad is proud of you!

If you continue your drive a little further out to the pond north of the Nature Center, you will see our new family fishing dock. Tony Hoffman's family donated funding for this dock in memory of Tony. This is a wonderful place to take the kids to do a little fishing, or maybe you just want to use one of the benches to enjoy a sunset. Either way, we hope you get an opportunity to use this new dock. We as a staff have had several youth groups on it and they absolutely love it. Thank you to Tony's family, what a wonderful, inclusive way to honor his memory.

If you head to Saude Recreation area in the Northeast part of the county, you will see 4 new cooking grills donated by Dave Johnson in memory of his wife Dawn. Dawn enjoyed spending time at Saude Recreation Area, and Dave wanted to help people enjoy the area as much as Dawn did. Thank You Dave. You have truly found a wonderful way to honor and celebrate Dawn.

Looking for a great spot to watch the Cedar River roll by? Check out the new memorial bench for James Koenigsfeld at Chickasaw park. It was not uncommon to catch Jim strolling around East Chickasaw Park. He enjoyed fishing in the area and visiting with other park goers. It seemed only fitting for the family to place a memorial bench in one of Jim's old fishing holes. Help us thank the Koenigsfeld family by stopping out, grabbing a seat on Jim's bench, and watch the river pass by.

We are currently working on an Eagle Scout project at Ringneck Haven, a dock donation for Howards Woods, and also a new Interactive Learning Center at Twin Ponds Nature Center. There will be more to come on those projects as they are completed in the new year.

How do you measure success? I get it. In business, the measurement may be profitability. In competition it may be wins and losses. For us, it is not always as black and white as profit or wins and losses. For me, I ask, "Are people buying into what we are doing? Do they see our vision and trust we are headed in the right direction?" If you look at what people have contributed in time, treasure, talent, and money to Chickasaw County Conservation, you definitely get the feeling of success.

None of this happens without an incredible staff and Conservation Board that are also united in the journey. I also need to thank Friends of Chickasaw County Conservation as they usually fill in any gaps in funding that we need to complete these projects. Also, thank you to the Chickasaw County Board of Supervisors for funding our department. Thank You all!

Have an idea for a project or looking to donate to a great organization? Give us a call at Twin Ponds Nature Center at (641) 394-4714.

Western Hognose Snake Heterodon nasicus

The Western what nose snake? That's probably what a few of you are saying to yourselves. Most Iowans aren't familiar with the western hognose snake, and with it being listed as Endangered in the state of Iowa, you aren't likely to run into one.

The western hognose snake is found mainly in the great plains states, North into Canada, and South into Mexico.

Western hognose snakes (also known as plains hognose snakes) are very unique looking. They are a wide-bodied, medium sized snake in length. They have a tan to light greenish color with dark blotches on their body. Perhaps one of the western hognose's most distinguishing characteristics is its upturned 'nose'. The front of their face has an upturned scale that resembles the snout of a pig. The only other snake found in Iowa that bears a resemblance to this is the eastern hognose snake. Much of the underside of the western hognose snake is dark in color, but it will have yellowish square/rectangular like markings mixed in.

Hognose snakes are interesting in the ways that they deal with danger. When a hognose feels that it is threatened, it may first try to escape to a safe place. This may be simply 'out of the way', or they may go underground. If that isn't an option, they may try to look intimidating. They are able to flatten out their head and neck area and hiss to mimic a cobra. They may even feign striking at their threat, or they will even strike at them with a closed mouth. They can also shake their tail to imitate a rattlesnake. They do not have a rattle. Several snakes will use this tactic to try to scare off predators. (There is much debate as to whether or not hognose snakes should be considered venomous. They are rear-fanged and possess a mildly toxic saliva that helps subdue prey. THEY ARE NOT CONSIDERED DANGEROUS TO HUMANS).

One final tactic that hognose snakes will use in the face of danger is to play dead. They will roll onto their backs and lay with their mouth open and their tongue hanging out. They may also release feces from their vent. While not being a dangerous snake to humans, they have a bag of tricks that they use to try to get us to leave them alone.

The western hognose snake will eat a variety of small animals. They are known to use their upturned nose to dig under things in search of prey. They are known to consume toads. One of the defenses of toads against predators is to puff up with air to make themselves more difficult to swallow. The western hognose combats this with its rear fangs to 'deflate' the toad. Other animals that the western hognose may eat include, frogs, eggs, smaller snakes, rodents, lizards and small birds.

If you are interested in checking out a western hognose snake in person, keep an eye out for an upcoming program, or stop out to Twin Ponds Nature Center.

Reservable Campsites

Chickasaw County Conservation is excited to announce that we will be providing the option for online registrations for campsites through mycountyparks.com. This opportunity comes with a $4.00 processing fee for each electronic transaction.

Airport Lake Park Campground: We are making 20 of the campsites and the group camping loop reservable. (As of right now, this is a work in progress, and will be reservable in the Spring of 2026). In order to reserve sites, you will need to go to <https://www.mycountyparks.com>. There, you should be able to select the campsite that you wish to reserve.

The reservable sites are spread throughout the campground to provide a variety of sites and locations. Each reservable campsite will have a QR code at the site that will be used to pay for the site, if it is not already reserved. These sites will be paid for by card only, not cash or check. All of the other campsites at Airport Lake will still be paid for by cash or check as they have been in the past.

Step 1: Go to mycountyparks.com and click on the shopping cart in the upper right corner of any page. You may continue as a Guest, or Create a User Account

Step 2: Select the Book Now tab from the top of the page

Step 3: Choosing a Facility:

- If you know the County you prefer— select from the listing
- Select your desired Check-in and Check-out dates from calendars
- Select Search and review your opportunities (non-specific selections will search entire state)
